

Pediatric Intensivist
Chicago, IL

The Joint Section of Pediatric Critical Care Medicine of Rush University Children's Hospital and the John H. Stroger Children's Hospital of Cook County in Chicago are recruiting 1-2 full-time pediatric intensivist(s) to join a group of 8 faculty. Special consideration will be given to candidates with advanced clinical experience.

Each hospital houses an up-to-date PICU with a combined total of 30 PICU/Intermediate beds. The hospitals are adjacent to each other in the Illinois Medical District, 2 miles west of downtown Chicago. The combined services provide significant multidisciplinary clinical exposure to the entire spectrum of critical illness in children.

The Rush PICU is a multidisciplinary and cardio-thoracic ICU and cares for patients in an 18 bed unit divided between high acuity and stepdown services. The Rush PICU has an active ECMO program that is supported by both cardio-thoracic and pediatric surgery. The Stroger PICU consists of 10 beds and supports very active pediatric Level I trauma and burn services. Both units are major referral centers for the metropolitan Chicago and its surrounding area.

The areas of interest amongst the faculty in the section are broad and diverse – including cardiac critical care, palliative care, disaster preparedness, medical education and administration, ethics, and quality and safety. Individuals who have pulmonology, cardiac critical care or palliative care training/work background/clinical career path and are encouraged to apply.

Responsibilities include patient care in the intensive care units, in-house call averaging every 9th night, medical student and resident education, administrative and scholarly pursuits. The position offers competitive salary, comprehensive benefits and an academic appointment commensurate with experience.
